The Late Mr Wm. Chapman.

The Chairman, before the close of the business, said that since their last meeting one of their vice-presidents had passed away. Mr Chapman was a keen student of nature, a born geologist, and an ardent antiquarian, a combination of tastes that made him one of the most delightful companions he had ever met. His declining health of late years had prevented him exploring the country, which he loved and knew so thoroughly, but his extensive knowledge of the district, and of local customs had ever been freely placed at the disposal of friends. Many pleasant chats had they had together, and although much had been committed to print he was sorry that so much of Mr Chapman's knowledge would no longer be at their disposal. As a member of the Society he had contributed much to their Transactions.

The meeting resolved to enter in the minutes an expression of regret at Mr Chapman's death.
